Microsoft, like Ford, in the early 1900's, has done the world a favor, by establishing a standard that was very much needed to make everyone's computer system compatible and therefore useable, at a time when there was no other compatibility between users. For this, they should be punished? Only greedy, self seeking men would attempt to punish progress in the excepted American way of freedom to create and build in this great country. Long live the Henry Fords and Bill Gates of this world. HE.OR. Freeman
